General Observations

Individual students' transcripts were also scrutinized to assess whether students' records in terms of the modules covered and examined correspond to what was planned in the curriculum. This went hand in hand with the scrutiny done by the Rwanda Medical and Dental Council especially concerning the students' academic background before they joined ISPG. It was found from this assessment that 25 students do not meet the conditions for indexing by the Rwanda Medical and Dental Council, which means that they are not admissible into the Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery.

A comparative analysis of the undergraduate programmes for both UR and ISPG Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery programmes was also made to be able to identify the gaps which the former students of ISPG may have. Given the time and circumstances within which this exercise was done, it was not possible to look into the assessment patterns, test items and academic decisions that led to progression of ISPG students from one year to another to ascertain whether they achieved the intended learning outcomes of each module and each year of study. The observations made therefore, and the recommendations thereof are only dependent on the comparison between the modules offered at ISPG with those at UR and their corresponding credits.

The 4 different cohorts had different gaps, some of which are overlapping. The following table shows the number of students per cluster and categories of modules, some of which are shared among the 4 cohorts, while others are particular to a specific cohort. The table also indicates that there are 11 possible clusters of modules depending on which ones are shared and which ones are particular to a certain cohort. It may be worth noting at this point the big number of students per cluster and start thinking of large classrooms and or splitting the clusters into smaller groups in order to run parallel classes. This will again require more small classrooms and more lecturers to facilitate the parallel classes.
